Luca Preis is Lecturer and Research Assistant at the Politecnico di Milano, where he teaches Architectural Design. He is co-author of several papers about architectural design and redevelopment of the urban city centre; his articles have been published in journals of architecture and urban planning, and he has participated in international conferences on the theme of urban regeneration. In these last few years he is working to set up a research on a specific case study, represented by the city of Fidenza, included in the basin of the Po valley, along the Via Emilia, with the purpose of showing a critical approach, able to express the potential of the small central dismissed areas in the process of urban
