

Curriculum vitae

Letizia Cattani is Lecturer and Research Assistant at the Politecnico di Milano. She obtained a PhD degree in Architectural Composition in 2010 at the Politecnico di Milano. She is the co-author of several papers about architectural design and the theory of composition in architecture. Actually she is working on a research about architectural design in developing countries and, in particular, she is interested on flexible and modular architectures used to realize typical aggregations that can be modified according to several users.